

5 QUESTIONS

Bradford Kent

Bradford Kent is the chef/owner of Olio Pizzeria & Café (8075 W. Third St., L.A., 323.930.9490, pizzeriaolio.com). He also operates one of the city's only mobile wood-fired catering units. Hey, Bradford... —Stefan Slater

Which chefs would you most like to cook for at Olio Pizzeria?

Mario Batali and Nancy Silverton—because our customers always compare our pizzas with theirs.

Any restaurant you're dying to check out?

I really wanted to eat at Ortolan—but they closed! That was No. 1 on my list. I guess my second choice would be The Bazaar.

What condiment is always in your fridge?

Heinz Ketchup.

Strangest thing you've ever eaten?

Ant eggs taco. I was vacationing in Tijuana. It was interesting. It was kind of like eating shrimp shells.

Most embarrassing guilty pleasure?

Taco Bell. I'm all about the bean and cheese burrito with green sauce and no onions.